Systemic sclerosis is a rare connective tissue disease characterized by an autoimmune response that includes a variety of autoantibodies that target extracellular matrix components and intracellular proteins of the endothelium. The etiology of the disease is unknown, but there appears to be an intrinsic dysregulation of T-cell homeostasis. The preponderance of B-cell stimulation may occur through the production of autoantibodies that autoreact and activate T cells, resulting in continued T-cell dysfunction. Recent studies have demonstrated that cytokines modulating autoimmunity are altered. Interferon-alpha and tumor necrosis factor-alpha are increased, whereas interleukin (IL)-10 is decreased. These novel findings may lead to a better understanding of the pathophysiology of systemic sclerosis and perhaps lead to the development of new therapies.The 5-Second Trick For cost of living in jersey city The five-Second Trick For cost of living in jersey city The economist from whom you're looking to reduce costs.
